|               | 8  | NOTE: The above child, Reginald, would be known in France as Renaud; however, he came to England with Eleanor, Queen of Henry II of England when she married him or when arrangements were made for the marriage (1151 or 1152).                                     |      |      |            |        |                        |      |     |            |  | DateTo         |                   |                                       |
|               | 9  | In virtually all of the sources above (except for the Complete Peerage) Reginald the above son has been confused with his son Reginald as though they were one and the same person. A study of the dates reveals the impossibility of there being only one Reginald. |      |      |            |        |                        |      |     |            |  | DateTo         |                   |                                       |
|               | 10   | The above child Guillaume does not marry Matilda (Maud) daughter of Robert FitzEdith, natural son of King Henry I of England, but rather she is the second wife of his brother Reginald.   |      |      |            |        |                        |      |     |            |  | DateTo         |                   |                                       |
